Police Recover Stolen Silverware in a Rooming House in East 11th St.

WIFE IN ADIRONDACKS

Valuable Papers and War Documents Taken—Two Arrests Made.

The home of F. H. La Guardia, President of the Board of Aldermen, at 1852 University avenue, The Bronx, was entered some time during the last eight days and ransacked by burglars while Mr. La Guardia was in Roosevelt Hospital recovering from an operation and Mrs. La Guardia was visiting in the Adirondacks.

The robbery was discovered last night when the Fifth street police station received a tip that stolen property was hidden in the rooming house at 101 East Eleventh street. Detectives searched the place and discovered 220 pieces of table silver marked "La G." in a brief case bearing Mr. La Guardia's name. They also found a silver tea set with the same mark, all of which they valued roughly at $2,000.

The University Heights police station was notified and sent a man to Mr. La Guardia's home. He found the rear window had been forced and that no one was at home. At Roosevelt Hospital it was said Mr. La Guardia was too ill to be disturbed, so his secretary, Miss Marie Fisher, accompanied the police through the house. It had been stripped of everything of value, Miss Fisher said, including some valuable papers and war documents which had been kept in the brief case found in the Eleventh street house. The papers were not found.

Miss Fisher told the police that she had been entrusted with the keys of the La Guardia residence during the absence of Mr. and Mrs. La Guardia, and that she had gone through the house eight days ago and found everything right.

At the Eleventh street address Thomas Calisen, 49 years old, proprietor of the rooming house, and Otto Cleven, 24, a seaman living there, were arrested on a charge of burglary. The room where the La Guardia silver was found was unoccupied. Calisen said the man who had just occupied it had left a few days after paying his rent. He did not know his name, he declared.

BEATEN AND ROBBED OF $1,000 BY 5 BANDITS

Jersey City Cashier and Aid Attacked in Office.

Five men armed with revolvers yesterday held up and robbed Harry Kiernan, cashier of the R. H. Perry Coal Company, in the company's office at Garfield avenue and Union street, Jersey City, securing $1,000. Kiernan and another employee, Harry Axt, were alone in the office when the robbers entered.

They stunned Kiernan with a blow on the head, tied and gagged the two men, cut the telephone wires, rifled the cash drawer and left in an automobile.

John Haulish, first of the men charged with highway holdup robberies in Nassau county, is placed on trial, was convicted in Minerva by a jury before County Judge Smith. His son, Clifford Haulish, will be tried next week.

ED FUREY FORFEITS BAIL IN ARNSTEIN CASE

Fails to Appear to Answer Charge of Extortion.

Judge Rosakovsky in the General Sessions yesterday ordered bail of $1,000 forfeited when Edward J. ("Big Ed") Furey failed to appear for trial on a charge of extortion brought against him by Joseph and Edward Gluck, Wall street messengers, whose confessions regarding the alleged plot to steal $5,000,000 worth of securities resulted in the arrest of Furey and others.

Furey tried to induce them to give up a diamond ring and cash amounting to $5,000, under threat of exposing their connection with the affair.

After ordering Furey's bail forfeited Judge Rosakovsky issued a bench warrant for his arrest. It was turned over to Detectives Brown and Mayer of Police Headquarters, with instructions to bring him in.

MRS. SCHWARTZ GETS $100 A WEEK ALIMONY

Counsel Fees Also Granted Pending Separation Suit.

Supreme Court Justice Hochstetler yesterday granted $100 a week alimony and $250 counsel fee to Mrs. Rose Schwartz of 575 West 172d street, pending settlement of her suit for separation from Henry Schwartz, real estate operator, whose income she said was $25,000 a year. Mrs. Schwartz alleges her husband has abandoned her several times in the case of a girl who signed her intercepted notes to Mr. Schwartz "Judy," and that he also went away and lived for a time with "Lillian." Mrs. Schwartz dropped dead yesterday in Main street, New Rochelle. McGrath was 61 years old.

The real estate operator made a general denial of the charges, explaining that he left his wife last June under an agreement to live apart for a while. He said his wife was a woman of bad temper and extravagant habits.

CHILD'S FALL PROVES FATAL.

Martin Mayer, 4, fell from the fire escape at the second floor of his home in Surf avenue, Coney Island, yesterday. He died in a policeman's arms on the way to the Coney Island Hospital.

FAITH WILLARD, FOUNDLING, DIES AND DR. GRANT MOURNS

Baby Found by Rector on His Doorstep and Adopted by Him Is Victim of Pneumonia—Mother Fails to Appear at Hospital.

Faith Willard, foundling ward of the Rev. Percy Stickey Grant, rector of the Church of the Ascension, died of pneumonia yesterday in Presbyterian Hospital, after an illness of several weeks.

Dr. Grant, who had become attached to the child, hoped her mother would read in the papers of the baby's critical condition and be moved to visit the hospital. He arranged at the hospital that any woman who claimed to be the mother of little Faith was to be admitted, but no one came, and the child died by her identity unknown. The name of Faith Willard was given to the foundling by Dr. Grant when he took the baby into his home after she had been abandoned on his doorstep last May.

It was said last night that the baby's funeral will be held in the rectory, 7 West Tenth street, and that she will be buried in the graveyard of the church. Dr. Grant and his fiancée, Mrs. Philip Lydig, have been constant visitors at the hospital. He was overcome when he learned of the baby's death.

Dr. Grant is a bachelor. His friends were surprised when they learned he had adopted a baby, but he received permission from the city to adopt her, and his housekeeper, Mrs. Graham, with the aid of two trained nurses, undertook to nurse the child.

Little Faith was less than two weeks old when she was found. Attached to her was a bundle containing three complete sets of baby clothes, and this note: "Please, if the Church of the Ascension is what I think it is, do not send my baby to an orphan asylum."

When he was asked why he had adopted the child, Dr. Grant said: "I suppose every bachelor such as I am thinks all babies look alike, but after you've held a little head close to your face most of one night that baby's face is graven on your memory, and I believe I'd know that little one anywhere. It's almost queer, you know, I always thought babies were sort of shapeless, but this one seemed well formed."

SHALLECK CLASHES WITH PROSECUTOR

Hines's Manager Tells Swann Attitude Is Unfair in Primary Assault Inquiry.

Joseph Shalleck, campaign manager for Jimmie Hines, who was an unsuccessful candidate in the primaries September 13 against Julius Miller, Charles F. Murphy to telephone booth nominee for President of the Borough of Manhattan, hopes to-day to be able to identify the men he says attacked him in the voting shack at Seventeenth street and Second avenue on primary night when he went there in response to a telephone message that "phone work" was going on in the counting of ballots.

After Shalleck told the story of the alleged assault to District Attorney Swann yesterday, and a medical examination disclosed scars upon his person and that he was still suffering from a bruise, the District Attorney directed George N. Brothers, one of his assistants, to conduct an investigation.

Mr. Brothers issued subpoenas, returnable this morning, for the Tammany election officials of the Second Election district of the Twelfth Assembly district, the policemen who were on duty there, and other witnesses. Shalleck said he felt certain he could pick out those who attacked him.

Shalleck told how he was knocked down, kicked, beaten with a blackjack and his right hand broken by a policeman's night stick. During his recital he was interrupted several times by District Attorney Swann, and at length he protested that these interruptions were unfair.

After being pushed out of the shack, Shalleck said, some one fired a revolver shot at him as he was being half pulled across the street to a taxicab. He said the mark of the bullet on his chest was still to be seen and that he would prosecute the overcoat and shirt he wore. He denied he ever had stated that any of his ribs were broken. The attitude taken by the District Attorney had made him appear a "liar and a faker," he complained.

At the request of District Attorney Swann, Shalleck agreed to submit to an examination by Otto H. Schultze, medical assistant to the District Attorney, and Dr. Charles Norris, chief medical examiner. They took him into an adjoining room and later reported he had found a brownish discoloration of the skin, two inches long and half an inch wide, on his chest. There was a triangular scar on his chin and a recent irregular scar, an inch long, on the back of his head, three inches above the base of his skull, he said.

The doctors also said Shalleck's right hand was swollen, that his left leg also was swollen above the knee and that it was tender under pressure. Besides these evidences of rough treatment, they discovered a series of five abrasions at the top of the left shin bone.

After the physicians had reported, Shalleck stopped close to District Attorney Swann and said in a friendly tone: "The only reason I'm bitter about this thing is because an attempt was made to show I wasn't injured at all. The attitude of your men is the reason I'm trying to discredit me. If you will call up Dr. Carrie Brandenberg, house physician at the Marlborough Hotel, you will find I was assaulted that night."

"By the way, did you get a certificate from her?" queried Judge Swann. Shalleck went up in the air.

"What do you mean by asking such a question?" he demanded. "Of course I didn't. I wasn't necessary. I don't care whether you investigate the case or not. I will appear whenever you want me." And Shalleck stalked out.

Mr. Brothers said he intended going thoroughly into the affair and that there would be no attempt at whitewashing any one in the proceedings to-day.

Eight Months Crushed by Timber in Unoccupied Stable.

Felix Bombas, 8, of 184 Eagle street, Brooklyn, lost his life yesterday while playing in an unoccupied stable at 231 Green street. The roof of the building fell on him. The stable had not been used for more than a year.

Felix was pinned to the ground by some of the timbers and broken from English Company 6 were summoned to get him out. The boy died at the Greenpoint Hospital.

CHILD IS STRANGLED AS 6 FIREMEN CHOP

Girl Falls From Top of Dumbwaiter on Which She Was Riding.

Josephine Bellucci, 8, of 2457 Belmont avenue, The Bronx, was killed by strangulation yesterday when her head became wedged between a dumbwaiter and its shaft at 653 East 188th street. She died while six firemen, with axes and crowbars, were working to release her.

Children in the neighborhood have found riding on dumbwaiters a source of much amusement recently. Josephine, with two other girls of about her age, spent an hour or more this way yesterday before the accident. Nick Battistelli and Johnny Box, boys of 653 East 188th street, furnished the motive power. With Josephine on top of the dumbwaiter and the other girls inside, the boys pulled them to the top of the house, which is four stories high, then let go of the rope and let them come down of their own weight.

The last trip up the Bellucci child decided she would get off at the first floor and called to the boys to drop the rope. As they did so she lost her footing and fell on top of the descending dumbwaiter, so wedging it that it stopped, and imprisoned the two other girls.

Frightened, the boys ran to the street and got hold of Fireman McCann of Truck 35, who was passing on his way home. McCann sized up the situation in a moment, called for an axe and had some one telephone the fire house while he set to work. Lieut. Martin and a squad of firemen responded. An ambulance was called from Fordham Hospital.

The firemen had to do a good deal of chopping, as the child was caught where the floor beams were, and they had to do it carefully to avoid injuring her. It was more than half an hour before they succeeded in releasing her. Dr. Barute, the ambulance surgeon, set to work at once trying to revive her, but finally pronounced her dead. Her neck was not broken.

The children imprisoned in the dumbwaiter were unhurt.

GADES FROM NORWAY TO DINE HERE TO-DAY

Distinguished Members of Family Happen in U. S.

There will be a reunion of the Norwegian Gades today. Dr. Herman Gade, Norwegian Minister to Brazil and intimate friend of Raoul Amdamson, Arctic explorer, arrived by the Lamport & Holt liner Vauban, from Rio, in the morning.

In the afternoon the Norwegian-American liner Bergensfjord, from Christiania, brought in Frederick E. Gade, president of the Norwegian societies of the world, and his wife, Mrs. Gade. Later they learned that the diplomat's brother, Harold Gade of Philadelphia, was also here, and to-day they will dine together.

E. Herman Gade said he would go to Canada to meet his wife and children, and to arrange for the food supply of the Amdamson ship now undergoing repairs at Seattle for her second Arctic drift, which might take about seven years.

LAW FOUND TO PUNISH NEGLECT OF 3 IN SEA

Report Awaited From Capt. Hudson, Who Is Accused.

Inspector J. L. Crone of the Federal Board of Statistics and inspectors believe he has found a law that might fit charges against Capt. Randall, suspended master of the United States Line steamship Hudson, who is accused of refusing to stop to help three men in a sinking motorboat off Ambrose Channel lightship last week.

The law is entitled, "An act to harmonize the national law of salvaging with the provision of the international convention for the unification of certain rules with respect to assistance and salvaging at sea, and for other purposes."

Inspector Crone says this provides that a ship must render all possible assistance in the saving of life and property in all cases where the ship's commander can do so without serious danger to his vessel or members of his crew. The penalty for violating this rule is $1,000 fine or two years in prison, or both. The board is awaiting the report of Capt. Randall. If he makes none it will proceed with the collection of testimony.

DEADLY BRUSH BOUGHT OUT OF CITY BY FARLEY

Dr. Copeland Warns to Demand Sterilized Articles.

The shaving brush which is believed to have infected Michael O'Farley, former Representative from the Twenty-fourth Congressional district, with anthrax was purchased out of town, said Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Health Commissioner, yesterday.

The department has not learned exactly where the brush was bought, except that it was not here. The health code here requires the sterilization of brushes. Dr. Copeland said he wished to warn the public not to buy shaving brushes not marked "sterilized" and stamped with the name of a responsible firm.

In 1920, before the sterilization requirement, there were twenty-three cases of anthrax in New York. So far this year there have been only seven cases. Mr. Farley died at Bellevue Hospital on Saturday.

DR. JAMES R. HAYDEN KILLS SELF ON LINKS

Kidney Specialist Steals Out of Club at Cedarhurst Early in Morning for Deed.

CAUSE OF ACT MYSTERIOUS

Daughter Says Physician and Wife Were Not Estranged; Stock Losses Denied.

Dr. James Raynor Hayden, 59, a widely known specialist of diseases of the kidney, committed suicide early yesterday morning on the golf links of the Rockaway Hunt Club, Cedarhurst, by firing a bullet through his head.

Less than an hour elapsed between the time Dr. Hayden left the clubhouse, where he had been making his home all summer, and the finding of his body near a bridge at the end of the links and within a stone's throw of the Woodmere Country Club.

The reason for Dr. Hayden's act remains a mystery. To all appearance he was in the best of health and spirits when he retired at midnight Sunday. That was the last time he was seen alive. William F. Ladd, a stock broker of 42 Exchange place, whose estate adjoins the grounds of the Rockaway Hunt Club, said Dr. Hayden had been his guest on Sunday and that he then was in excellent health and did not appear to be worrying. Mr. Ladd said he and the physician played cards together and that when they separated an engagement was made to meet at luncheon yesterday in the financial district.

Denied Estrangement.

Henry W. Hayden, brother of the physician, a lawyer with offices at 85 William street, said Mrs. Alfred Macy, daughter of Dr. Hayden, denied a report that financial difficulties resulting from stock operations had been worrying the physician.

"It is also untrue that my mother and father had been estranged," Mrs. Macy said last night, adding that Mrs. Hayden then was with her at her father's town house, 121 West Fifty-fifth street. It was reported in the afternoon that Mrs. Hayden was living in West Hampton, but the names of friends with whom she was supposed to be stopping could not be ascertained.

Night attendants at the clubhouse saw Dr. Hayden enter and go to his room Sunday night, but no one saw him leave yesterday morning. The front door is kept locked until 6:30, so the police believe the physician could not have left before that hour, as the latch still was turned when the watchman opened the door. It was about 7:15 A. M. when a laborer discovered the physician's body. He notified Capt. Joseph Lynch of the Woodmere police station, who had the body removed to Jackson's morgue in Cedarhurst. The bridge where the body was found is half a mile from the Rockaway Hunt clubhouse.

Louis M. Hales, justice of the peace and acting Coroner of Cedarhurst, examined the body. The weapon, which was found in the physician's right hand, had only one empty chamber.

Once Columbia Professor.

Dr. Hayden was born in this city, studied at the Columbia Grammar School, and won his degree as a physician in 1884 at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, of which he was later a professor for a time. He was attached to Bellevue and Roosevelt hospitals for years, and was in almost constant demand because of his advanced knowledge of kidney ailments.

The physician's body will be removed to his city home to-day. Services will be held there Thursday morning and the body will be interred at Woodlawn Cemetery that afternoon.

Dr. Hayden leaves his wife and three daughters, Mrs. Macy and the Misses Faith T. and Ruth T. Hayden. He was a member of the Calumet and Metropolitan clubs and of the Society of Colonial Wars.

J. H. CAINE'S SUICIDE
DUE TO LOST SAVINGS

Dentist's Son Had $1,400 and Expected to Marry.

The suicide of James H. Caine, 21, son of Dr. James H. Caine, a well known Brooklyn dentist, was disclosed yesterday by a relative to depression arising from loss of $1,400, his savings, by an unfortunate investment. It is understood that young Caine intended to furnish a home with his savings in the public art museum, where he had been employed for several years. He was addressed to Miss Kathryn Oldland, 19, of 165 Monroe street.

Members of the girl's family said yesterday they knew nothing of any understanding between the girl and Caine. Caine, according to information obtained yesterday, worked as an assistant to a surveyor out and around in New York.

Just before returning to Brooklyn, six months ago, he lost it in a wildcat investment and had been out of work.

EPIDEMIC GIVES RIGHT TO SEIZE APARTMENTS

East Siders Would Be Placed in Safe Quarters.

The Board of Health has authority to take persons out of crowded East Side apartments and place them in high class houses and apartments in other parts of the city that are vacant, and would do so in case of an epidemic if necessary. Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Health Commissioner, said yesterday in discussing the housing situation.

"The housing condition is not improving," he said. "Nothing has been done to relieve conditions, and our investigation shows there are 100,000 more families than houses."

The selling of vacant houses and apartments would not be done on frivolous grounds, he said. A vote of two members of the Board of Health on the signature of the Mayor would be required.

Slackerism During the War Became Odious

especially in America. Any sort of inefficiency is a form of slackerism. A schoolboy and a college mate should remember this. His teacher will not like to use the word odious, but she writes it down somewhere that so and so is a slacker.

To "loaf" on any job or avoid any plain duty is slackerism. A father or mother too busy to train a son or daughter in honor, honesty and straightforwardness is likely to regret it as a serious mistake. [Signed]

Two Unusual Paintings and
Fine Dining Chairs in Needlepoint
Are Among the English Antiques

NOW AU QUATRIEME

The painting in oil illustrated is one of a pair of fine eighteenth century bird paintings, the frames painted in bronzed gilt designs. The coloring of these pictures is brilliant and would be wonderful in a room with dark English furniture. In the painting shown the large bird is a gay red parrot, while in the companion picture the central bird is a graceful white pheasant with sweeping tail, $1,100 the pair.

Three sets of English chairs with needlepoint seats, best adapted for dining room use, are fine examples of the best skill of their period.

Perhaps the finest of the three is a set of six side chairs in walnut of a rich brown tone, perfect examples of the Queen Anne style, with cabriole front legs, their needlepoint seats being the original, and very rich in dark design. $3,300 the set.

A set of six mahogany Hogarth side chairs have their seats covered with needlepoint, copied from the original Queen Anne designs, garden flowers on a dark brown ground. Each chair has a different design. $1,500 the set.

Very beautiful and unusually fine is a set of eight Queen Anne walnut side chairs with needlepoint seats. The wood is very light in color and soft in effect and the needlepoint seats have a cream background covered with gay flowers. The knees of the front legs have two exquisitely carved shells. $3,500 the set.

It is the result of the natural reaction that has set in among really well-dressed young men against the increasing growth of what are known as "trick" styles.

Individuality in clothes is not undesirable, but it can be carried to extremes. It is being done. And the pendulum is poised to swing the other way.

Some of the best examples of the new suits cut for young men will be found in the special section of the Men's Store set aside for young men.

Suits, 33 to 40 chest measurements, $35 to $60 each.

Topcoats, $35 to $65.
